

2B.2

The pronouns y and en

Point de départ The pronoun y replaces a previously mentioned phrase that begins with the prepositions à, chez, dans, en, or sur. The pronoun en replaces a previously mentioned phrase that begins with a partitive or indefinite article, or with the preposition de.

PREPOSITIONAL PHRASE
Nous allons chez le médecin.

PRONOUN
Nous y allons.

PREPOSITIONAL PHRASE
Il était le chef du Front Populaire.

PRONOUN
Il en était le chef.

- The pronouns y and en precede the conjugated verb.

Es-tu allée à la plage?
Did you go to the beach?

Oui, j'y suis allée.
Yes, I went there.

Achètent-elles de la moutarde?
Are they buying mustard?

Oui, elles en achètent.
Yes, they're buying some.

Tu te mets à la danse?
Are you taking up dancing?

Oui, je m'y mets.
Yes, I'm taking it up.

Vous revenez de vacances?
Are you coming back from vacation?

Oui, nous en revenons.
Yes, we're coming back from vacation.

- In the passé composé, the past participle never agrees with y or en.

Avez-vous trouvé des fraises?
Did you find some strawberries?

Oui, nous en avons trouvé.
Yes, we found some.

- Like other pronouns in an infinitive construction, y and en follow the conjugated verb and precede the infinitive.

Quand préfères-tu manger chez Fatima?
When do you prefer to eat at Fatima's?

Je préfère y manger demain soir.
I prefer to eat there tomorrow night.

Vas-tu prendre du thé?
Are you going to have tea?

Non, je ne vais pas en prendre.
No, I'm not going to have any.

- Never omit y or en even when the English equivalents can be omitted.

Ah, vous allez à la boulangerie.
Oh, you're going to the bakery.

Tu y vas aussi?
Are you going (there), too?

Est-ce qu'elle prend du sucre?
Does she take sugar?

Non, elle n'en prend pas.
No, she doesn't (take any).

Boîte à outils

Even though the past participle does not agree with y or en, it still agrees with the subject for verbs requiring the auxiliary être in the passé composé.

Anne est allée à l'hôpital?

Oui, elle y est allée.

Vérifiez